

CITY MATTERS.

L. D. Levy, of New York city, is here on a visit to his brother.

Each of the hotels has several members of the Maggie Mitchell Company.

There will be preaching at the First Presbyterian church this evening at 7:30. Good music. Everybody is invited.

Trains on the Ohio Southern are again running over the bridge near Bainbridge, which was damaged a few days ago by the high water.

Mr. Had. Thomas, formerly of Springfield but now a wealthy cattle owner in Southern Colorado, is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Thomas, of South Factory street.

On an examination of the body of Bob Maxwell, the express agent shot near Jackson, it was found that 83 balls had penetrated the body, both barrels of the shot-gun being discharged.

The aged mother of R. M. Gano, the photographer, died yesterday in her 84th year. Funeral services to-morrow afternoon at two o'clock, at the house on Washington street, third east of Yellow Springs. Friends are invited to attend.

The New Carlisle Creamery Company, capital $5,000, located at New Carlisle, this county, was incorporated in the Secretary of State's office, at Columbus, yesterday. This is a new industry recently started at New Carlisle, with good prospects of success.

Last evening Officer Hughes learned that two boys were trying to sell three revolvers. He watched for them and finally caught them on High street. They were taken before Chief Schuchman and the revolvers taken from them. They were then allowed to go.

R. P. Willis, the plumber and gas fitter, wishes the statement made that it was a boy, and not a man—certainly not himself—named R. P. Willis, who was arrested for a disturbance at one of the Opera House Monday night. As he is the only adult citizen of the name the publication puts him in a bad light.

Jonas Overholser, aged about sixty years, an old citizen of German township, near Lawrenceville, died last night at his home from the effects of accidental shooting several weeks ago. Gangrene set in recently, the patient dying of blood poisoning. Funeral services will be held at the house to-morrow at 11 o'clock a. m.

The authorities of Delaware, Ohio, have sent here asking the use of a fire steamer during the time necessary for the rebuilding of their own, as proposed. There are three steamers here, which are seldom used since the completion of the water works. It is probable the "Western" engine, which is in good condition, will be loaned our Delaware neighbors.

Frank Funk, the well-known printer of this city, has applied for a patent on his invention of a galley rest for printer's use. It is the most practical and ingenious little device for the purpose intended that we have any knowledge of, and is perfectly successful. It can be manufactured cheaply and should sell well, as it will be an almost indispensable article in every printing office.

AMUSEMENTS.

Maggie Mitchell at the Grand To-night—Entertainments for Saturday.

The people's favorite, Miss Maggie Mitchell, in "Pearl of Savoy," at the Grand Opera House to-night.

Next Saturday afternoon the Howard Athenaeum Specialty Co., with a host of talented performers, will appear at the Grand. This is a first-class company. Anything under the Rich & Harris, the proprietors, is No. 1. The matinee prices will be only ten and twenty cents for ladies and children. These prices are reduced to meet the times. See the advertised prices elsewhere.

Last night's deed was committed, which for genuine deviltry, cannot well be excelled. George Fields, the foreman at the Lagoda street-car stables, had occasion last evening to drive one of the cars himself. As he was returning to Lagoda, a man jumped on the car at Spring street and sat down. When the car reached Lagoda avenue the fellow walked to the forward end of the car and, opening the door, poured the contents of a bottle of vitriol on Field's face.

He then ran to the rear end and, jumping off, escaped in the darkness. When Fields reached the stable, he examined his coat and found that it was almost entirely burned off him. It is not known, of course, who the dastard was who committed the deed, but it is supposed to have been a fellow that Fields discharged some time ago.

More About Maxwell's Brain.

The brain of the suicide, Dr. Maxwell, will be preserved and brought before the Central Ohio Eclectic Medical Association, at the session here January 17, when there will be a full investigation and report by the society.

Before leaving for home last night Mr. Sweeney, the father-in-law, was given an opportunity of making a microscopic examination for himself, satisfying him that the organ was diseased in a manner to affect the mind of the deceased while alive.

He accordingly left, feeling much better in his own mind, and will make the situation much lighter for the wife and child. Mr. Sweeney gave Dr. Barry, who attended the family, and to whom he felt under obligations, exclusive permission to remove the brain, and the latter did so, with assistance of others. The body will probably be buried now, as no permission for its dissection was given. Only Dr. Barry and one or two others know its present whereabouts.

Urban Camp Meeting Directors.

The following from the Urbana Daily Citizen of Tuesday is of special interest to stockholders in the association in Springfield and Clark county:

The annual election of directors of the Urbana Camp Meeting Association, was held at the office of E. B. Patrick yesterday afternoon. The election resulted in the selection of the following directors: S. W. Hitt, John Kenaga, B. O'Neal, A. B. Ranyan, J. W. Deerdorff, Noble Osborn, W. R. Pool, W. Withrow, R. D. Williams, Thomas Sharp and E. B. Patrick. The board was then organized by the election of E. B. Patrick, President; John W. Kenaga, Vice President; H. M. Crow, Secretary; B. O'Neal, Treasurer.

The Treasurer made a report, showing a balance on hand of $98. The only debt of the association now is a note of $200 on the tabernacle, which leaves the organization in a fine financial condition. There are several improvements talked of for next year which will add convenience to the ground. Another bridge across the ravine at the upper part of the ground will be built, and a well at the upper part of the ground for the convenience of the tenters in that locality will also be added. Rev. A. N. Spahr was again chosen to take the control of the devotional part of the meeting.

JANUARY STOCK SALES.

Report of the 342d Live Stock Sales Held at London, Ohio, Tuesday, January 6, 1886.

The sales last Tuesday were well attended, but there were fewer cattle on the market than were ever offered in London on sales-day. Some lots were withdrawn, but most of the offerings were taken at a slight advance over December quotations, best lots bringing five and one fourth cents per pound, poorest about three cents. Mr. Roberts reports:

He Knew It Was a Hen.

A story of a Christmas dinner comes to us rather late, but nevertheless it is a good one. A party of married gentlemen and ladies—that is, we think they were married—were seated around the festive board, enjoying the delicacies and luxuries usually attending a Christmas dinner. The turkey had been carved, and one of the gentlemen was fortunate enough to get the breast bone. After he had masticated this tender morsel a number of the guests noticed that he was busily engaged in thought. He was not disturbed, but finally, picking up the breast bone and holding it out, he said: "That was a hen turkey." This remark attracted the attention of the guests, and one of them inquired how he knew it was a hen. "Because," replied he, the breast bone is crooked, showing that the hen wore her corset too tight."

The new club rooms of the Springfield Social Society were opened by the Phoenix Dancing Club last night. Foreman's orchestra furnishing the music. The affair was given in honor of Isaac Morris, who left for Baltimore this morning. Dancing was kept up until past midnight, and it was an enjoyable affair generally.

Fighting Sleep with Tea.

The practice of taking tea or coffee by students, in order to work at night, is downright madness, especially when preparing for an examination. More than half of the cases of break-down, loss of memory, fainting, etc., which occur during severe examinations, and to do it in a cruelly short time. He filled his contract by sitting up several nights successively by the aid of strong tea or coffee (I forgot which). I saw him shortly afterward. In a few weeks he had aged alarmingly, and become quite bald, his hair gave way and never recovered. There was but little difference between his age and mine, and but for this dreadful cerebral strain, rendered possible only by the alkaloid (for otherwise he would have fallen to sleep over his work and thereby saved his life), he might still be amusing and instructing thousands of readers by fresh volumes of popularized archaeological research.—Popular Science Monthly for December.

Who has not noticed the increasing strength of grocery bags? A few years ago it was dangerous to attempt to carry heavy goods in them. Manufacturers tested all known paper making materials in their search for greater strength, such as grasses, wild rice straw, Kentucky hemp, flax, linen waste, jute and many others. Manila was found most satisfactory, but very expensive. An inch ribbon of manilla paper has been made sufficiently strong to support 200 pounds. The same size strip of cotton sack cloth gives way at twenty-eight pounds. Large quantities of old manila rope are now worked up into paper bags.

HOUSE AND PARSONS.

FOR OLD LADIES.

There is nothing more pleasing to an old lady than easy, comfortable footwear. The following goods were ordered especially for their benefit, and we cordially invite an inspection of their merits:
House Shoes of Fine Serge, Quilted and Flannel lined.
Glove Kid Fleece Lined Buckskins.
Felt Slippers, with uppers and bottoms entirely of felt, making them thick and warm.
Soft Kid Shoes, high cut.
Common Sense Shoes in French and Curacao Kid, hand-turned, hand-welt, and machine sewed.

De Long's Time-Pieces.

Lieut. Greely, since his return home, says a Washington dispatch to the Milwaukee Sentinel, relates a number of curious incidents connected with his expedition during their two years' residence in the Arctic regions. The most singular of all, however, is a story told to him by Mrs. De Long, a few weeks since, which she vouches for as being true in every respect. According to her narrative, when Commander De Long started on his cruise toward the north pole he gave to his wife to keep for him a valuable and highly-prized watch. He also left with her a small nickel-plated clock. He enjoined her to keep the watch wound up, adding, jestingly, that that was something difficult for a woman to do for two years. She continued to perform the duty most carefully, but one day the watch suddenly stopped, as also did the clock, and both on the same hour and minute. An examination of the watch by a jeweler showed a broken main-spring, but the clock was without injury. Nothing was thought of the occurrence at the time, though the anxiety of Mrs. De Long had caused her to make a note in her diary of all the facts. The affair was almost forgotten as a trivial circumstance until the wife received the journal of the brave dead husband, in which he had noted on a certain date that his watch and the ship's chronometer had stopped, both at the same time, and by comparison of days and circumstances it was found that all of De Long's time-pieces, those in the Arctic as well as those at home, had been in perfect sympathy; all had ceased to tick on the same day, at the same hour, and the same minute.

In Norway.

We found ourselves anchored in a land-locked bay which I will call for convenience sake Brusydals. There are fifty Brusydals in Norway, and this is not one of them. That is all which I need say. It forms the head of a deep inlet well stocked with dabs and haddock, and whiting, and wolf-fish, and other mousers. The land-cape is at once grand and gentle; mighty snow-capped mountains cleft into gorges so deep and dark that the sun, save in the height of summer, can never look into them, while on the immediate shores rich meadow-land and grassy undulating hills stretch along the fiord for miles, and from the estate of a prosperous bonder, who rules paternally over his mountain valley, a river runs in near our anchorage, which, after leaving a lake half a mile from the sea, winds down with an everflowing stream through healthy vine-cloves slopes, and grassy lands covered with wild roses and bilberries.

The cuckoos were calling in the woods as we came up, wideopen and wild duck were teaching their young broods to take care of themselves; oystercatchers flew to and fro, and there was no fear of men in a place where no one cares to hurt them. Boats with timber were passing down the river to a saw-mill opposite the mouth. The lake out of which it flows is two miles long, and ends in a solitary glen, closed in by precipitous cliffs on the east and west. There was beauty here and grandeur, food of all kinds, from mutton to bilberries, now ripe and as large as grapes. Above all, we knew by past experience that sea-trout swarmed in the lake and trout in the river. The bonder's assistance we had made ready. The interest of the old man, learning from the pilot who we were, came on board at once with his son and the schoolmaster to pay his respects. He himself was hale and stout, age perhaps 60, with dark hair, which as yet had no gray streaks in it; in manner very much of a gentleman doing the honors of his country and his dominions with rough dignity.

His lake, his river, all that he had, he gave us free use of. The fish had not come up in any number yet, but perhaps there might be some. He accepted a glass of wine being temperate, but not severely abstemious. The younger ones touched nothing of that kind—toasters they called themselves. They were two fine-looking men, but without the father's gentility, and with a slight tinge of self-righteousness. The interest of the man was a bear which they had just killed among them, having caught him committing murder among the sheep. As the flocks increase the bears multiply along with them, and the shooting of one is an event to be made much of. The particular offender's head came home with us, swinging in the rigging, and looked so savage, grinning there, as much to reduce the pleasure of the crew in going ashore among the bilberries.—Froude, in Longman's Magazine.
